REBEL ACCOUNT OF THE FALL OF FORT PULASKI.

Consternation at Savarnah ---- The Citizens Drugged to the Field ---All hope Goness-The Rebel Fleet to be Sunk -- The Property Captured.

Special Correspondence of The Behmond Inspatch SAVANNAH, April 12, 1862.

The telegraph has informed you of the surrender of Fort Pulaski, and the consequent state of excitement you can well imagine. The evening of Friday passed in suspense, and no fear was felt but the gallantry of the garrison had caused the silence of the enemy's guns, which had To-morrow evening is offered the best not been heard since 2 p. m. yesterday. I cannot devote much time to the bombardment, as little is known about it here - mere hearsay rumors from one who left the fort immediately previous to the surrender-without a word from Col. Olmstead, commanding the post, and no information of the condition of capitulation. There is no question that the fire to which the fort was subjected was intensely severe. The wild report of steel pointed shot is the merest nonsense, and Parrot guns that pierced a solid wall (well constructed and firm, of near sixteen feet in thickness,) at one shot, is a Munchausenism too glaring to impose upon any one. I can give you but a faint idea of the consternation the capture produced. Since the abandonment of the design of the enemy to bring his gunboats from Wall's Cut, the confidence of the citizens became more assured, and the wisest hope that the fort, which thereupon became the key and safety of Savannah, would be enabled to detain the enemy for an indefinite time. The blow has and equally unprovided for. The enemy will not wait long to attack the batteries about Fort Jackson. Their heavy ships have entered the river above Pulaski, as low, and are in plain view of the defenses of the city of Savannah. How long they will be able to withstand an attack, let Pulaski be your teacher. We will be driven from them as surely as we now accept the fact of the loss of Pulaski. The city has been in intense excitement between the bold and rapid advance ing taps upon the shoulder which the inflict. Governor North Carolina Arrested!

FEDERAL FLEET BEFORE NEW OBLEANS!

Forts Jackson and Philip Still Occupied by the Confederates!

Washington, april 30 .- The President has nominated W. T. Sherman Major General of Voluntteers.

The Governor of North Carolina has been arrested and imprisoned at Richmond, on account of Union sentiments.

WASHINGTON, April 30 .- The War Department has issued an order to arm and clothe the negroes to be enrolled in Hunter's Division.

Jackson withdrew his wagons six miles in Shenandoah Mountains, about retiring.

Gen. Lovell telegraphs Cooper that the Confederates still hold Fort Jackson and Ft. Philip, says the Federal fleet is at New Orleans, but haven't forces sufficient to occupy the city, and that the inhabitants are staunchly loyal to the Confederacy.

Louisville, April 30 -The river is falling rapidly. Twenty-three feet in the canal.
